As the school holidays are approaching, suspicions may arise in a number of ways that a child is being prepared for FGM to take place abroad. If any agency becomes aware of a child who may have been subjected to or is at risk of FGM, they must make a referral to Children's Social Care (see referrals to Children's Social Care Procedure).

All professionals need to consider whether any other indicators exist that FGM may have or has already taken place.

For example:

- Preparations are being made to take a long holiday – arranging vaccinations or planning an absence from school
- The child has changed in behaviour after a prolonged absence from school
- The child has health problems, particularly bladder or menstrual problems
- You are aware of women in the family who have had the procedure and this may prompt concern as to the potential risk of harm to other female children.

FEMALE GENITAL MUTILATION

INFORMATION LEAFLET

What is Female Genital Mutilation (FGM)?

Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) is any procedure which involves the partial or complete removal of the external female genitalia, or other injury to the female genital organs for non-medical reasons.

Many believe that FGM is necessary to ensure acceptance by their community. However, this custom is against the law in the UK and many other countries.

Female Genital Mutilation and The Law

All types of FGM have been illegal in the UK since the 1985 Female Circumcision Prohibition Act. The new Female Genital Mutilation (FGM) Act 2003 updates and extends the original act.

It is now 'an offence to take UK nationals and those with permanent UK residency overseas for the purpose of circumcision, to aid and abet, counsel or procure the carrying out of Female Genital Mutilation (all types of circumcision). It is illegal for anyone to circumcise women or children for cultural or non-medical reason'.

A person convicted of an offence under the FGM Act 2003 is liable to imprisonment for up to 14 years.

Re-infibulation is also illegal: women will not be sewn back up following child birth.

Types of FGM

FGM Type 1
Sunna - removal of the hood of the clitoris.

FGM Type 2
Excision - removal of the clitoris with partial or total excision of the labia minora.

FGM Type 3
Infibulation - removal of the clitoris and labial minora with narrowing by stitching of the vaginal opening.

FGM Type 4
All other types of harmful traditional practices that mutilate the female genitalia, including pricking, cutting, piercing, incising, scraping and cauterisation.

Who is at risk of FGM?

FGM is mostly carried out on young girls sometime between infancy and age 18, and occasionally on adult women.

It can also be classed as Honour Based Violence.

Practising communities include (but are not exclusive to) Ethiopian, Eritrean, Sudanese, Somalian, Nigerian and Sierra Leonean.

These countries have significant populations that practise a variety of religions which are often used to justify the practice of FGM. However, this is a mistaken belief as FGM is primarily a social practice, not a religious one.

Health Implications

Short term health implications include: severe pain and shock; broken limbs (from being held down); infection; increased risk of HIV and AIDS; urine retention; injury to adjacent tissues and immediate fatal haemorrhaging.

Long term health implications include: uterus, vaginal and pelvic infections; cysts and neuromas, infertility, increased risk of fistula, complications in pregnancy and child birth; sexual dysfunction; difficulties in menstruation; considerable psycho-sexual, psychological and social consequences; trauma; flashbacks and depression.

An estimated 10% of victims die from short term effects and 25% from recurrent problems.
